

Contents

Preface	5
Acknowledgements	6
Introduction	7
PART I. THE SYNTAX OF THE SENTENCE (MAJOR SYNTAX)	11
Preliminaries	11
1. The definition of the sentence	11
2. The sentence, the clause and the utterance	16
3. Modality as the basic sentence-forming factor	17
4. The paradigm of the sentence	20
5. Structural sentence types	21
1. The Semantic (Propositional) Structure of the Sentence	23
1.1 Introductory observations	23
1.2 General semantic features of the processes	25
1.3 Material (doing) processes	33
1.4 Happening processes	65
1.5 Mental processes	69
1.6 Verbal processes	80
1.7 Relational processes	83
1.8 Existential Processes	91
1.9 Semantico-syntactic transposition of the semantic constituents	94
2. The Syntactic (Clausal) Structure of the Sentence	100
2.1 Introductory observations	100
2.2 The syntactic structure of the simple clause	101
2.3 The syntactic structure of the composite clause	112
2.4 Problems of the syntactic analysis of the clause (by way of summing up)	124
3. The Informational-Pragmatic Structure of the Sentence	136
3.1 Introductory observations	136
3.2 The informational-pragmatic structure of the declarative sentence	137
3.3 The informational-pragmatic structure of the interrogative sentence	142
3.4 The informational-pragmatic structure of the sentence vs. the syntactic (clausal) structure of the sentence	147
3.5 The interrelationship of the semantic, syntactic and informational- pragmatic levels of the sentence	158
3.6 The pragmatic functions of the sentence	162
4. The Clause and the Text	168

PART II. THE SYNTAX OF THE WORD-COMBINATION (MINOR SYNTAX)	177
1. Theoretical Problems of the Word-Combination	177
2. Types of Word-Combinations and Their Structural Features	184
2.1 Subordinate word-combinations	184
2.2 Predicate word-combinations	188
2.3 Coordinate word-combinations	190
CONCLUSION	196
REFERENCES	198