

LANGUAGE and PERCEPTION

George A. Miller

Philip N. Johnson-Laird

Contents

Introduction	1
1 The Sensory Field	9
1.1 Formal Theories of Sensation	11
1.2 Attributes of Sensation	14
1.3 Quality	18
1.4 Intensity	25
1.5 Duration and Extension	26
2 The Perceptual World	29
2.1 Formal Theories of Perception	33
2.2 Objects, Surfaces, and Colors	39
2.3 Space, Place, and Size	57
2.4 Time	76
2.5 Changes, Motions, and Events	79
2.6 Causes and Intentions	92
2.7 Processes Underlying Perception	109
2.8 Summary of Notations	112
3 Routines: A Fragment of Conceptual Theory	116
3.1 Meaning, Verification, and Understanding	119
3.2 Search and the Management of Attention	131
3.3 Organization of Memory	141
3.4 Routines	158
3.5 Translation into Routines	167
3.6 Summary of Control Instructions	210

4	Labels, Words, and Concepts	212
4.1	Labeling Objects	217
4.2	Hierarchical Field Properties	237
4.3	Contrastive Field Properties	260
4.4	Conceptual Integration	267
4.5	Labeling Persons	301
5	Properties and Relations	322
5.1	Color	333
5.2	Kinship	360
6	Some Fundamental Concepts	374
6.1	Spatial Relations	375
6.2	Temporal Relations	410
6.3	Causal Relations	468
7	Some Meaning Patterns of English	524
7.1	Verbs of Motion	526
7.2	Verbs of Possession	558
7.3	Verbs of Vision	583
7.4	Language of Communication	619
7.5	Organization and Scope of Semantic Fields	665
	Conclusion	690
	References	711
	Index of Names	745
	Index of Subjects	753