

ANAPHORA AND SEMANTIC INTERPRETATION

TANYA REINHART

CONTENTS

Preface

1. Structural Relations and Restrictions	13
1.1 Syntactic Domains	13
1.2 C-Command	18
1.3 Domain Restrictions on Interpretative Rules	25
2. Coreference of Definite NPs	28
2.1 Theoretical Assumptions	28
2.2 The Non-relevance of 'Precede-and-Command'	34
2.3 The C-Command Rule	41
2.4 A Comparison Between the C-Command and the Precede-and-Command Rules	43
2.5 Coreference in Sentences with Extraposed Clauses	48
2.6 PPs and Indirect Objects	53
2.7 Coordinate Structures	54
3. Prepositional Phrases and Preposed Constituents	59
3.1 Sentential and Verb-phrasal Prepositional Phrases	60
3.2 Preposed PPs	67
3.3 Topicalisation and Left-dislocation	82
3.4 Summary	86
4. A Survey of Functional Approaches to Definite NP Anaphora	94
4.1 Discourse-oriented Approaches	94
4.2 Relational-grammar Approaches	101
4.3 Semantic Approaches	106
5. Bound Anaphora	112
5.1 Quantified Antecedents	112
5.2 Reflexive and Reciprocal Pronouns	131
6. The Indexing System of Interpretative Semantics	136
6.1 A summary of the Anaphora Conditions	136
6.2 The Indexing System	137
7. The Interpretation of Pronouns: A Restatement of the Anaphora Problems	141
7.1 The Problems with the Current Anaphora Picture	142
7.2 Coreference and Bound Anaphora	150

Contents

7.3	The Coindexing Procedure and the Interpretation of Coindexing	157
7.4	Coreference	163
7.5	Summary	170
8.	Unsolved Problems of Anaphora	175
8.1	PP Problems	175
8.2	Possessive NPs	177
8.3	'Experiencing' Verbs	179
9.	Other Interpretative Rules	181
9.1	Function-argument Representations	182
9.2	Relative Scope of Quantifiers	188
9.3	Theme-rheme Relations	198
10.	The Psychological Reality of the C-Command Conditions	202
10.1	Syntactic Rules	202
10.2	Processing Strategies	208
	References	217
	Index	222